Hello, Happy New Year!

Did you know?

Hot Water Energy Saver

Heat Pump Water Heaters are the latest technology for heating water in your home. Instead of generating heat directly with electricity or gas, they are very efficient at using electricity to transfer heat from the surrounding air to the water inside the tank. Heat pumps are like a refrigerator working in reverse. Instead of removing heat from an enclosed box and dumping that heat to the surrounding air, a HPWH takes heat from the nearby air and transfers it into the water in the tank.

This upgrade alone offers two to three times more energy efficiency than conventional electric resistance water heaters. Upgrading to a heat pump water heater not only saves you energy and money on your utility bill, but also provides greater comfort throughout your home.
